

Visting Assistant Professor of South American Environmental Archaeology

Written by Maria Bruno

Sunday, 01 March 2015 12:06 -

There are no translations available at this moment. Thanks for your comprehension.

The Department of Anthropology and Archaeology at Dickinson College invites applications for the position of visiting assistant professor of archaeology for the 2015-16 academic year. We seek an anthropological archaeologist whose teaching and research focus on food production and/or environmental archaeology in South America. Ph.D. or ABD required. Teaching responsibilities will be five courses: an introduction to world prehistory course each semester; one course each semester in area of specialization; and an advanced undergraduate course on archaeological theory.

Dickinson College is a highly selective four-year, independent liberal arts college with 2300 students. Located 20 minutes west of Harrisburg, PA, it is a two-hour drive from Baltimore, Washington DC, and Philadelphia and three hours from New York City. The Department of Anthropology and Archaeology has 22 undergraduate anthropology majors and 32 majors in archaeology. Our seven full-time faculty in cultural anthropology, biological anthropology, and archaeology conduct research in North America, South America, East Asia, East Africa, and the Mediterranean. We emphasize student research through our methods courses, our three laboratories—biological anthropology, environmental archaeology, and classical archaeology—and department-run field schools in cultural anthropology and archaeology.

Please apply to <https://jobs.dickinson.edu> with a letter of interest and CV that includes names and contact information of three references. Review of applications will begin March 6 and will continue until the position is filled. Questions may be directed to Dr. James Ellison, Department of Anthropology and Archaeology, Dickinson College, Carlisle, PA 17013 via archaeology@dickinson.edu

The ability to create inclusive learning environments for an increasingly diverse student body will be an important characteristic of the successful candidate. Dickinson College is committed to building a representative and diverse faculty, administrative staff, and student body. We encourage applications from all qualified persons.